BULL MOOSER GETTING WARY

Those of Nebraska Herd Watching Movements of Roosevelt.

MAY BREAK OUT OF CORRAL

Fear Their Former Leader is Trying to Find Some Way by Which He Can Get Back into Republican Ranks.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, May 31.—(Special.)—It is evident that the movement of Theodore Roosevelt are not setting well on the political stomachs of the leaders of the bull moose party in Nebraska who fear he is shuffling the cards in such a way that eventually he will deal himself a hand which leads him to coast his fortunes again with the republican party.

What they want to know it just what will become of them.

For example, just where it will leave Chief Engineer Frank P. Corrick, the colonel's right hand man in Nebraska, who has been working so hard and faithfully to prevent the bull moose herd from breaking back into the G. O. P. pasture, and which Mr. Corrick does not like to consider.

In the first place he pretends not to take any stock in the reports that Theodore is receiving his former cry of nonamalgamation and is now favoring fusion with the republican party in places where it is best to do so.

It is known that the bull moose feed box has not been very plentifully supplied in Nebraska with the kind of feed that makes a manager's smile expand.

Corrick has been traveling over the state organizing paper county committee and it is openly hinted that a portion of the funds for keeping up the work of preventing the bull moose from following their inclinations to come back to the republican party have been furnished by democrats interested in putting a third party state ticket in the field this year in order to split the normal republican vote.

At any rate it is recalled that when the late bull moose banquet was pulled off in Lincoln that leading democrats like Charles Bryan, representing the national administration; Clarence Harman, representing Governor Moorhead; Earl Gaddis, representing the World-Herald; Mr. Gilligan, representing George W. Berger; Dr. P. L. Hall, democratic national committeeman; E. V. Johnson, representing Congressman Maguire and several others were boosting the banquet and when the bull moose speakers took their seats at the table there were democrats to right of them, democrats to left of them, democrats in front of them, and from a financial standpoint now it looks as if democrats might have been behind them.

One of the most rampant bull moose in Lincoln in 1912 said this morning in the lobby of the Lindell hotel, when asked what he thought of the present conditions, "I think it is only a question of a very short time before the two factions will be together, especially if the republican party adopts progressive principles satisfactory to Mr. Roosevelt."

SON OF WEST POINT PIONEER CONTESTS WILL

WEST POINT, Neb., May 31.—(Special.)—The last will and testament of James O'Connor, an aged resident, who died at West Point some weeks ago, is being contested in the probate court by his only son, Hugh O'Connor, of Scott's Bluff.

The testator left several bequests aggregating over $1,000 and among them leaving the son, Hugh, only $100, on the ground that he had already given him a farm. The grounds of the objection to the probate was that the deceased was not of testamentary capacity at the time of the execution of the instrument. Judge Dewald admitted the will to probate. The matter will doubtless be appealed to the district court. The estate is all personal.

Rev. Ferdinand Feich, late of Randolph, Neb., who has been appointed rector of the West parish, vice Monsignor Ruesing, resigned, has arrived and taken up his work here.

The funeral of Louis Ulrich, a prominent farmer of Monterey township, occurred on Wednesday on stomach trouble. The deceased was 67 years of age and was a pioneer of the township. He leaves a widow and several young children. The funeral occurred this morning from St. Boniface church at Monterey.

Leigh S. Krake, son of Judge S. E. Krake of Flawley, former county judge of Cuming county, will graduate on June 9 from Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, taking the degree of doctor of medicine. Dr. Krake is a graduate of the West Point high school.

Seventy-one graduates from the eighth grades of the rural schools of Cuming county is the report made by Miss Emma R. Miller, county superintendent of schools.

Rev. A. E. Klemenz, who has been assistant pastor of St. Mary's church at West Point for the last twelve years, has been removed by the bishop and is now acting as assistant at the Holy Family church, Omaha. Father Klemenz was very popular in this community and his departure is regretted.

BROKEN BOW TAKES STEPS TO GET CARNEGIE LIBRARY

BROKEN BOW, Neb., May 30.—(Special.)—At the last meeting of the city council definite action was taken regarding the establishing of a $10,000 Carnegie library in this city and a resolution favoring the project was unanimously adopted. If the library is secured, part of a disused street, located in the heart of the city, will be vacated and used as a site for the building, the location being a most desirable one. The city also pledges itself in this case, to levy a tax of not less than $1,000 a year for the maintenance of the library.

The old theory of feathers being non-conductors of lightning seems to have been exploded when, during the last thunder storm, lightning struck the residence of L. E. Cole of this city. The bolt entered the south window of an upstairs bedroom, tore out the casing, ran up the mop board, climbed the leg of an iron bedstead and burned a big hole through a thick feather bed without setting fire to anything else. The family did not know the house had been struck until members entered the room the next day.

Work is now under way overhauling the plant of the Broken Bow flour mill, which has been idle for several years, the property having been leased for five years by C. W. Jones and T. D. Taylor, who are at present operating the Sargent mill.

The seven girls and nine boys of the graduating class gave an interesting program of songs, solos and orations. But the innovation of the debate by four boys was the hit of the evening. Diplomas were presented by F. W. Russell, president of the Board of Education, and teachers' certificates to five members of the class by Superintendent E. W. Marcellus. The interest of the evening, however, centered around the action of the alumni in the informal reception and the unveiling of a portrait of Mrs. Emily Kent Manville, a former teacher who acted as principal of the school during the years 1887 to 1888. After the welcome to the graduating class by Earl Tahlum, a solo, "Backward, Turn Backward" just preceded the unveiling of Mrs. Manville's portrait by Mrs. Anna Nedela Spirk of Wilber and Miss Agnes Akasmit, two of the three members of the first graduating class under Mrs. Manville. BROWNELL HALL OF FUTURE

Junior Day Play Shows What is Hoped Will Come True.

WORDS WRITTEN BY STUDENTS

Class Prophecy About Seniors, as Sung at Close of Entertainment, Makes Pleasing Hit of the Evening.

A prophetic view of Brownell Hall fifty years hence, with hundreds of students, eight fine buildings and a huge campus in Fairacres, was given Saturday evening at the school before a large audience of parents and friends, in the presentation of the annual junior day play by the junior class. The offering was entitled "One Hundred Years of Brownell Hall," and was decidedly original and clever. The school year just ending marked the fiftieth in the history of the hall.

The prologue of the play depicted a scene in the room of a senior girl this year. One of the principal characters, played by Miss Esther Wilhelm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wilhelm, longed for a glimpse of Brownell and its students a half century ago and also as far into the future.

Thereupon Brownell led her in a fanciful dream back to the days of '64 and '65, and the second scene of the play showed the library of the old hall, with its earliest students in the costumes of the war days. Then the vision of the future, the court of the new Brownell, it is proposed to be erected soon in Fairacres at a cost of $250,000, appeared as the other scene in the brownie dream.

It appealed strongly to the audience as a probability to be worked for by all friends of the hall. Between that scene and the epilogue, wherein the dreaming student, a mother's future, Bishop Arthur L. Williams spoke briefly. He expressed the hope that the splendid plans for the new hall would soon become a reality, and rousing response which he received from the audience indicated that the hope was shared by all and was backed by their willingness to help.

Miss Julia Gleason, faculty leader of the junior class, was tendered an ovation at the close of the program for her important part in directing the affair. Miss Dorothy Ringwalt, physical director of the hall, received similar recognition for her share in the play's success, as she had directed the dancing.

Under Miss Gleason's able leadership the junior girls had written the play and the words for the songs, a number of which were interspersed throughout the four scenes. In accordance with the traditions of the hall, the event was the formal farewell to the seniors by the juniors, and it was carried out with a touching sincerity, leavened with humor, which appealed strongly to everyone present.

Those in the Play. The junior class of twelve young women, all of whom took part, is as follows: Misses—Esther Wilhelm, Mary Taylor, Adah Hendry, Alice Frost, Gracie Stout, Jacy Allen, J. Greenfields, Marian Turner, Helen Walsh, Genevieve Hornbrook, Margaret Lemen, Genevieve Hornbrook, Marguerite Brown.

In addition, these freshman and sophomore girls played the parts of the brownies: Misses Adelaide Fogg, Margaret McGregor, Elizabeth Ringwalt, Esther Smith, Ruth Thompson and Josephine Williams.

Junior Girls' Prophecy. At the end of the last scene, the senior girls, beautifully gowned and all carrying bouquets, grouped themselves near the stage and sang their original class prophecy about the juniors, which caused much merriment. They closed with a touching goodbye song, and were so vigorously applauded that they had to repeat the long selection in its entirety.

The faculty, headed by the principal, Miss Euphemia Johnson, and the young women of the two upper classes, shook hands and said farewells to the guests as they passed out the door, and thus was put into the history of Brownell hall another of its happy and notable junior days. The baccalaureate sermon to the seniors will be preached this morning at St. Matthias' church, and the graduation exercises take place Tuesday morning.

"Talks on Newspaper Advertising"

By TRUMAN A. DeWEESE, Buffalo, N. Y.

Selling Life Insurance

There are many reasons why newspaper advertising ought to be effective in selling life insurance. No one wants to see a life insurance agent—and yet so thoroughly has the public been educated upon this question that the beneficence of life insurance is now universally recognized.

While the man of average intelligence knows that life insurance is a good thing and that he ought to carry it, he does not want to be "talked" into it.

There are many reasons for this. He does not want to waste time listening to arguments in behalf of something that requires no argument. Another reason is that he has a natural reluctance of being reminded of the approach of death. No man in the possession of his senses wants to contemplate the possibility of death, and yet he knows very well that it is coming to him and that he ought to make some provision for those he will leave behind. But he does not want to be told by an agent, or any one else, that he is going to die sometime.

Another reason is, the agent is not selling him anything tangible. In this respect the book agent has an advantage over the life insurance man. The book agent is selling something you can touch and handle.

The life insurance man is selling "blue sky"—he is dealing in "futures." He calls it life insurance, and yet he cannot insure your life against the coming of the grim messenger, and he knows it. What he is really selling you is a contract to give your heirs a certain amount in the event of your death.

Life insurance is a misnomer. No one knows who invented the term, so it is not possible to reach him; but certain it is that the term is misapplied and tends to deceive the popular mind as to the real nature of the insurance business—indeed I think it not unlikely that the use of the term "life insurance" has tended to retard its universal acceptance by investing it with an atmosphere of chance. It encourages the notion that life insurance is "a gamble" when the truth is, it is a savings bank for the man who would like to make some provision for his family in the event of his death and who would never make use of the ordinary savings institutions.

Now, could any commodity be better adapted to newspaper advertising? Here is something a man doesn't want to talk about, and yet he knows he ought to have it. He doesn't want to listen to the importunities of agents, many of whom do not understand either life insurance or Human Nature. He is willing to read about the benefits of life insurance during his leisure moments. He is willing to be "educated." And think of how many persons the newspaper can "educate" regarding life insurance while the agent is talking to one "possibility."

Newspaper advertising need not displace the agent. It should be used to develop "possibilities" for the agent. Think of the time wasted by the average agent on impossibilities! With intelligent newspaper advertising the hundreds of inquiries that are developed would lead the agent to persons who are actually "possibilities"—persons who had really given some serious thought to life insurance. If the advertising copy is written on the right lines it would soon draw inquiries from a long and attractive list of persons who have already been "educated" and who are in a receptive mood and who are only waiting to learn what advantages one company may possess over another company.
